

PNAC -- it's all just a little bit of history repeating

In an ordinary criminal case, two questions are of the highest priority: Who had the means and who had the motive to perpetrate the crime? Whoever qualifies for both needs an alibi.

The alibi in this (admittedly not ordinary) criminal case was presented to us in the shape of Osama Bin Laden and his 19 thieves. But is it bulletproof? Let's review:

Condoleeza Rice and other members of the Bush Administration ardently asserted that they had insufficient indices to prevent or even anticipate the attacks -- and yet the FBI was able to parade all culprits, including passport photos, within 24 hours. The media started pointing towards OBL even before the buildings had collapsed.

Speaking of passports: It was claimed the buildings fell due to infernal firestorms -- nevertheless, an unscathed passport was found on the NY streets, which identified an individual by the ominous name of "Satan Al-Suqami". Further "evidence" came in the form of Atta's luggage, which supposedly missed his final flight -- in it a Koran, a pilot's uniform, a last will, a letter with instructions for all the other supposed hijackers and a flight manual. What a convenient package. Just imagine, he might have needed his manual...

Shortly thereafter, 6 of the accused protested at their respective embassies -- they were alive, well, and most of all innocent. The media remained silent (The story was, however, broken by the BBC. In the meantime, they have recanted, probably due to some kind of cock-up). The FBI now openly admits that they do not know the identities of the hijackers and have no evidence for Osama's culpability in regards to 9/11 -- but the media remain silent. We have been sold phantoms for the West's nemesis and started two wars in response, wars that by now have claimed approximately one million lives.

Cui Bono? Who benefits?

Certainly not the Afghans and Iraqis. Neither the greater Muslim world, that nowadays finds itself demonized with a verve that begs the question whether the funds for "defense" would not be better spent on public education. But then, who benefited?

Enter the "Project for the New American Century", PNAC -- a neoconservative "think tank" out of Washington DC, founded by illustrious individuals such as Dick Cheney, Donald Rumsfeld, Paul Wolfowitz, Richard Perle, Douglas Feith, John Bolton, et al -- in short: half the Bush Administration.

In September of 2000, the PNAC published a strategy that turned out to be a blueprint of political history since 9/11. The PNAC was intent on capitalizing on the US' role as the last remaining superpower and aggressively pursuing hegemony -- a Pax Americana, global dominance.

Their strategy can be summed up as follows: Establishment of a strong military presence in the Middle East and Caspian Basin to secure and exert control over the world's largest oil reserves present in these regions. Militarization of US society to provide the means necessary. Pursuing technological "Full Spectrum Dominance" -- military supremacy on land, sea, in air and space.

It was expected that such policies would not garner a lot of sympathy from the American people, and thus they readily admitted:

"Further, the process of transformation, even if it brings revolutionary change, is likely to be a long one, absent some catastrophic and catalyzing event -- like a New Pearl Harbor"

One year later, the New Pearl Harbor became reality, and the PNAC's plans could be set in motion, leaving blood, tears and misery in their wake.

All their misdeeds -- "preemptive" war, torture camps, the end of habeas corpus, the sacrifice of countless souls and the creeping progression of Orwellian surveillance, just to name the most horrific -- would have been impossible were it not for the monumental, traumatizing attacks of 9/11, and first and foremost their accompanying myth, which served to somehow justify it all.

It is time to expose this myth, to deny the criminals their alibi, and let justice be served.

Don't you think?

somebody set up us the bomb

Remember Larry S.? Larry had leased the WTC merely 6 weeks before 9/11 from the Port Authority for 99 years. Many deemed him a fool, as it was well known that the complex would have to undergo asbestos removal at the cost of billions, and a demolition permit was out of the question. With his acquisition, the "renovation" began in the only partially occupied Twin Towers, during which tenants were obligated to move into vacant offices on demand. In the course of the takeover, Larry also tripled the volume of terror insurance (and subsequently proceeded to demand twice that amount, as 2 planes constituted 2 attacks in his opinion). His 6 week investment of about 200 million in this way "earned" him some 3 billion dollars in insurance payments.

Security services of the WTC were provided by a company named Securacom whose chairmen were Marvin P. Bush and Wirt Walker -- relatives of G.W. Bush

Apart from the WTC, Securacom handled security of Dulles Airport and United Airlines. The company was liquidated in 2003.

NORAD

The "North American Airspace Defense Command" is responsible for securing American airspace. Its mission includes both military and civilian protection.

If a flight unexpectedly deviates from its course and/or ceases radio communications, fighter aircraft on patrol are redirected or dedicated aircraft scrambled to establish visual contact, find out what's wrong and if necessary intervene. Such intercepts are routine operations that occurred 67 times in the 9 months preceding 9/11, according to NORAD spokesman Maj. Douglas Martin. The average intercept takes 10-15 minutes after notification.

On 9/11, 4 airliners supposedly circumvented this sophisticated air defense system completely for up to 80 minutes, to finally slam into the Pentagon, the very heart of the US military, unhindered. And that even though only minutes away, Andrews AFB constantly has fighters ready to protect the capitol. This proposition is absurd!

But perhaps less so once you learn that on the morning of 9/11, a multitude of wargames were going on, simulating a grand-scale terror-event incorporating multiple kamikaze-hijackings. Civilian radars were fed phantom signals. The wargames redeployed parts of the northeastern fighter contingent to northern Canada and Alaska while another agency rehearsed a plane crash in Washington DC. A biohazard emergency was to be simulated in Manhattan.

No one could have imagined the terrible events -- the events that were being rehearsed the very same morning.

Now that is chutzpah.
